Effects of Age on Detection of Emotional Information

Suzy Lynn Queue

Lee College
The Effects of Age on Detection of Emotional Information

Introductory information begins here. There is no need to title this section as “introduction” because that is obvious. A brief history, definition of the situation, and other aspects required by your instructor goes here.

Discussion

Content

Each paragraph should begin with a topic sentence that is directly related to your research topic. Next, make sure that the sentences in the paragraph are directly related to the topic sentence.

Be sure and use transition words between paragraphs for smooth reading. Transition words such as the following: For example . . . , Consider the case of . . . , To demonstrate . . . , For instance . . . , To illustrate . . . , Secondly . . . , Finally . . . , are among many examples of transitions.

Conclusion

Check your assignment page to be sure all the information required by your instructor is included in this section. Remember that your “References” page needs to be the very last page.

To set up a running head and page number in MS Word 2010

1. Click on “Insert”
2. Click on “Page Number” and then “Plain Number 3”
3. Click on “Different First Page”
4. Type your information and align left. You may have to use your space bar to separate running head and page number. Font and font size should match rest of your paper.
5. Header information should omit the works RUNNING HEAD after first page
6. Once you are set up, click on the red X on the right hand of the page to continue typing, or you may click on the bottom of the page to make the dotted line disappear.
References

