

'Remembering Harvey' comes to Town Square

The Lee College Players will present 'Remembering Harvey,' a collection of remembrances of the hurricane that brought massive flooding to the region a year ago, at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12 and 13, on the stage at Baytown Town Square, 213 W. Texas Ave.

The outdoor performances are free.

Theater instructor Kim Martin described "Remembering Harvey," as, "a challenging and provocative look back at the events which rocked the world of our region and community one year ago. In this originally conceived presentation, we will invite the community to look back at Hurricane Harvey, relying on our artistic resources to remember and reevaluate the experience that has left many of our community's citizens touched for life."

Lee College also performed this original production at the Fort Worth Fringe Festival, Sept. 7, 8, and 9, a play festival presented by Texas Nonprofit Theatres.
