Huntsville Students in the Revised Second Chance Pell Experiment (34 CFR 668.43(a)(5)(vi))

If a program under the Revised Second Chance Pell experiment is designed to meet educational requirements for a specific professional license or certification that is required for employment in an occupation (as described in 34 CFR 668.236(a)(7) and (8)), the institution must disclose information to students regarding whether that occupation typically involves State or Federal prohibitions of the licensure or employment of formerly incarcerated individuals. In addition, the college must disclose to interested students information about the options available for incarcerated students to complete any remaining program requirements post-release; and inform students of the academic and financial options available if they are not able to complete the academic program while incarcerated. This includes explaining how the students can continue in the program after release, transfer credits earned in the program to another program offered by the institution, or transfer credits earned in the program to another postsecondary institution.

Licensure: There are no required licensures associated with this program.

Certification: There are no required certifications associated with this program, however, students will be given the opportunity to earn a Servsafe Manager Certification. The Texas Department of State Health Services requires food establishments to have at least one certified food protection manager who has successfully passed an accredited food safety certification exam, such as ServSafe.

Options to Complete the Culinary Program Post-Release: Students who do not finish their program while they are incarcerated and wish to complete their remaining program requirements post-release have many options. There are several Texas community colleges that offer Culinary programs, such as Houston Community College, Alvin Community College, and Galveston College. A current list of Texas community colleges offering Culinary (or any other program) can be found by googling "THECB Program Inventory." All Texas community colleges accept transfer credits from other Texas community colleges, and they all use the same course numbering system, so transferring courses from one community college to another is straightforward.

Financial Options to Complete the Culinary Program Post-Release: Students who wish to complete their remaining program requirements post-release have several financial options. Lee College, like all Texas community colleges, provides financial assistance including Pell Grants, Texas Equal Opportunity Grants (TEOG), Texas Public Education Grants (TPEG), and other financial aid programs. In addition, Lee College and most other Texas community colleges provide payment plans to help students budget their payments.
